The data controller should adopt appropriate security and organizational measures to protect personal data. For instance, it should formulate security guidelines or operational regulations to prevent data leaks.